

VAN ZANT'S "DOPE" FILLS SHELF AT POLICE STATION

Officer Finds Many Clever Tricks in Illegal
Drug Traffic.

Tucked away in a drawer at Police Headquarters is a collection of bottles containing morphine, cocaine, and other drugs that would rival the shelves of the best stocked drug store in the city.

Most of this collection of "dope" is taken from prisoners arrested by John W. Van Zant, who is detailed to make an inspection of all drug stores and as far as possible prevent the illegal traffic in drugs in the District. In most cases the drugs are sold by peddlers who go from house to house visiting their customers every few days, and the devices employed to cover up their "business" indicate a latent power of inventive genius.

"Doctor" Van Zant.

From long association among the men at the different precincts, which he visits daily, Van Zant has become known as "Doctor," and it is the one title by which he is generally known.

During the last few years Van Zant has done much to break up this illegal traffic in drugs, and today it is next to impossible for the occupants of disorderly houses and other questionable resorts to obtain morphine and cocaine. According to the police, there are several cocaine "joints" across the Long Bridge and Aqueduct bridge in Alexandria, which are frequented by Washingtonians.

These places, it is said, have sprung up since the authorities have kept up their persistent campaign against selling drugs in the District.

Book Drug Case.

One of the most unique devices to hide drugs in the collection is a large medical book which was taken from a shelf in a store that had been under observation for some time. Persons who were known to be confirmed drug fiends were seen visiting this place, and the police became suspicious. The proprietor denied that he did other than a legitimate business, and gave the police permission to search the store. The contents of all bottles were carefully investigated on suspicion that they might be labeled wrong. Boxes were ransacked, and drawers carefully inspected.

On a shelf was a set of harmless-looking books, but the police decided to look them over. Taking down the largest book, it was found that the pages had been pasted together and the center cut out. Inside the book there were three or four bottles containing several ounces of morphine.

Headache Powders.

Frequently cocaine and morphine is put up in the shape of headache powders, and sometimes they are combined into a solution that is labeled "hair tonic." Some fake doctors and healers also receive considerable attention from their practices does not comply with the law in every detail, they are brought into the Police Court.

AMELIA WEISS MUST GIVE BAIL

RECORDS OF NAVIES COMPILED BY RAWSON

Following the release of Jacob Weiss, who was held at the Alexandria county jail in connection with the shooting of John W. Mullen, yesterday morning on $1,000 bond, Commonwealth's Attorney Mackey announced today that unless Amelia Weiss could furnish bail she would be held a prisoner until Saturday, when there will be a preliminary hearing.

Miss Weiss still says that Mullen was shot by a negro, who afterward dragged her into the woods. The county authorities, however, are certain the shooting was done by a member of the Weiss family.

Mr. Mackey has obtained the slouch hat said to have been worn by Jacob Weiss when witnesses allege they saw him coming from the scene of the shooting.

With the assignment of Professor of Mathematics Edward K. Rawson from the Naval Academy at Annapolis to the Navy Department in this city, it is expected by the officials of the department to complete within six months the task of compiling the official records of the Union and Confederate navies in the civil war.

The work was started at the suggestion of the late Rear Admiral John G. Walker, who, as chief of the Bureau of Navigation, suggested both the establishment of a general library for the Navy Department and the compilation of the war records of the navy. Much of the work has been accomplished by Capt. Charles W. Stewart, who for several years has been librarian and superintendent of the naval war records. Twenty volumes already have been published, and about four volumes remain to be completed by Prof. Rawson.

Flags of Confederacy Pictured in Pamphlet

United Veterans Issue Booklet of Designs for Benefit of Those Who Care to Reproduce Emblems of 1861.

In order that reproductions of Confederate flags may be correctly made in the future and that the emblems of the Southern cause may be pictured in their proper colors and designs a pamphlet has been issued by the authority of the United Confederate Veterans which contains the flags of the Confederate States. On the title page is the battle flag. The pages of the pamphlet are given over to minute descriptions of the various flags and not only offers a correct medium through which these emblems may be reproduced but affords good reading to those who are otherwise interested in the subject.

The Provisional Congress in its report of March 4, 1861, directed that the Confederate flag should consist of a red field with a white space extending horizontally through the center and equal in width to one-third the width of the flag, the red spaces above and below to be the same width as the white. The union blue should extend down through the lower red space. In the center of the union there is a circle of white stars corresponding in number with the States of the Confederacy. The union is square, the stars five pointed. The length of the flag is one and a half times the width.

The battle flag is square, having a Greek cross of blue, edged with white and with thirteen equal five-pointed stars upon a red field, the whole bordered with white.

$19.75

As one woman remarked: "What's the use of paying $25.00 elsewhere for a suit when one suits me better here at $19.75. I might as well save the $5.25 as not."

That's the feeling about our $19.75 suits. We are glad of it. We have labored to secure the best results possible in these suits as regards tailoring, style, and fabric. We feel gratified that our efforts have been appreciated.

In these suits you can secure practically any style, such as

PRICES HAVE NOT ADVANCED On Hahn's FALL SHOES!

THAT'S welcome news; for elsewhere the usual $2.50 shoes are now $3—$3.50 shoes now $4—and so on. Either that or the quality has been cheapened to meet advanced cost.

We anticipated market conditions many months ago. By placing enormous orders for thousands of pairs before leather advanced and before the manufacturers' busy season—we're now offering you Better Shoes Than Usual—at Our Usual Prices!

PATENT KID SHOES ALWAYS WEAR WELL

It's absolutely the SAFEST shiny leather you can buy—hardly ever breaks. Besides, it's soft, gives to the foot, and does not "BURN." But it costs more than other leathers and no other Washington store uses it except in $5 shoes.

We contracted for immense quantities of Patent Kid Shoes many months ago—carefully selected the leather and workmanship. Consequently we're enabled to offer these $5 Grade Shoes $3.50 in stunning styles of Blucher, Laced, and Button Boots and Oxfords for men and women at.....
